ACC NOTABLES

COLLEGE CUP APPEARANCES
2013 marks the 13th straight year that at least one ACC team has reached the College Cup. Since 2001, when the NCAA Tournament expanded to 48 participants, league squads have combined for seven national championships and have taken 23 of the 52 slots at the College Cup.

In that time span, the ACC is the only conference to send three teams to the College Cup and has done so three separate times (2008, 2009, and 2013). The ACC has sent at least two squads in seven of the past 10 years.

Overall, ACC programs have made 49 appearances at the College Cup and won 15 national championships.

NONCONFERENCE PLAY
The ACC combined for a 59-19-11 mark against nonconference opponents during the 2013 season. In tournament play, that record was 11-1-1 for a winning percentage of .885, the best in the nation. The 11 wins is at least twice as many as any other league.

MAC HERMANN TROPHY
Maryland's Patrick Mullins won the MAC Hermann Trophy for the second straight year, while Notre Dame's Harrison Shipp was also a finalist. ACC student-athletes have taken the honor six times since 2002, including the past three years.

'OF THE YEAR' HONORS
ACC coaches and players collected a lot of individual postseason awards, led by the MAC Hermann Trophy for Mullins, who also was named the Player of the Year by Soccer America. Notre Dame's Bobby Clark was named Coach of the Year by Soccer America and the NSCAA. Notre Dame's Harrison Shipp was selected as the Player of the Year by Top Drawer Soccer.

ACADEMIC ALL-AMERICANS
Notre Dame's Harrison Shipp was named the Capital One Academic All-America of the Year, the second straight ACC student-athlete to win the honor. The league tied for the national lead with three players honored: Shipp and Clemson's Thomas McNamara on the first team, and Notre Dame's Patrick Hodan on the third team.

Ten ACC players were selected in the 2013 MLS SuperDraft, tied for the most from any conference in the nation.

Two-time MAC Hermann Trophy recipient Patrick Mullins of Maryland was the highest ACC player selected, going with the 11th overall pick to the New England Revolution. Fellow Terrapin Schillo Tshuma, a sophomore midfielder, went 17th to the Portland Timbers, while Notre Dame senior defender Grant Van de Casteele was the last pick in the first round at No. 19 by the Colorado Rapids.

With those three selections, the ACC has produced at least two first round picks every year in the 19 years of the MLS draft, and has had at least three in each of the past six seasons.

Clemson senior midfielder Thomas McNamara was taken with the first pick of the second round by Chivas USA. The New York Red Bulls drafted Wake Forest senior defender Chris Duvall two picks later with the 22nd selection, and fellow Demon Deacon Jared Watts, a senior midfielder, went 33rd to the Colorado Rapids.

Wake Forest senior defender Tolani Ibikunkle was the highest player taken on the second day of the draft, going 11th in the third round and 49th pick overall to the Colorado Rapids. NC State senior midfielder Alex Martinez, the 57th overall selection in the draft, was chosen by Sporting Kansas City.

The Philadelphia Union claimed senior midfielder Luca Gimenez early in the fourth round with the 63rd pick, the fourth Demon Deacon to be selected in the draft. Virginia Tech senior defender Devante Dubose is headed to the San Jose Earthquakes after being selected with the 66th pick.

In addition to the players drafted, four more from the ACC signed as MLS Homegrown Players this offseason. That list includes Notre Dame senior forward Harrison Shipp (Chicago Fire), Virginia freshman midfielder Jordan Allen (Real Salt Lake), Wake Forest junior forward Sean Okoli (Seattle Sounders FC) and sophomore defender Jalen Robinson (D.C. United).

Ten ACC players were selected in the four rounds of the MLS SuperDraft, tied with the Pac-12 as the most from any conference. The first two rounds were held on Jan. 16 in Philadelphia, Pa.
